this work focuses on the all black 92nd infantry division in the italian campaign in world war ii and the poor combat performance of the division in italy an introduction provides an overall view of the italian campaign and the role of the 92nd infantry division the author then examines the reasons for the division s troubles on and off the battlefield such as the low morale among the soldiers because of racial segregation the limited facilities provided for them and their lack of trust in their leadership all of these issues are explored at length information on the early life and military training and experience of general ned almond is provided along with the stories of vernon baker and john fox who emerged as leaders but endured a long struggle for recognition the author concludes this work on a personal note by telling of his involvement as principal investigator of acting secretary of the army john shannon s study of why no african american received the medal of honor in world war ii a situation that was rectified in the late 1990s see elliot v converse daniel k gibran et al the exclusion of black soldiers from the medal of honor in world war ii mcfarland 1997 29 95 follows the movements of the 29th infantry division of the u s army over the course of forty five days of combat during the normandy campaign this book was written to remember my uncle private first class melvin w dunn he was a member of general george patton s 3rd army 5th infantry division and the 10th regiment in world war ii he was killed during the ardennes offensive better known as the battle of the bulge on january 28 1945 through some luck and research i have been able to find a few men who fought with him in the 10th regiment they have told me of their memories of the war and of the men with whom they fought the men are all in their eighties and nineties with fading memories of a war sixty plus years ago some memories however have not gone away and are quite vivid the war was an important part of their lives and something they can never completely forget i don t think many today understand the war and how much of the world was affected at least fifty million people lost their life because of the war the destruction of property was tremendous and it was years before reconstruction was completed in the war torn countries it was impossible for life to return to normal in europe the american soldiers returned home but were changed and for many it took years before the war left their daily thoughts we owe a huge debt to those who served in the war and they deserve to be given our appreciation with rockets firing and trumpets playing
