what if simply changing musical styles could resurrect social power and religious vitality by the early 1990s christianity was losing ground nationally and mainline protestants were trending even whiter and older than america s overall demographic trajectory the churches knew they needed to diversify yet many mainline churches focused their energies on the so called worship wars intense aesthetic and theological controversies running through much of white christian america historically churches had only supported one musical style now many mainline protestant congregations were willing to risk internal schism to support both contemporary worship centered around guitars praise bands and choruses and traditional worship with its pipe organs chancel choirs and hymns surely they thought musical diversity would broadcast tolerance and bring in new members perhaps it would even help them regain their historically central role in american society based on years of ethnographic research white washing our sins away explores how american mainline protestants used internal musical controversies to negotiate their shifting position within the nation s diversifying religious and sociopolitical ecosystems providing a fresh examination of the nature of third world development the author focuses on the characteristics of particular places and regions and their influences on behaviour this is an important study of the relationship between population movements and regional and national changes
